St. John's University
Department of Art and Design 2016 Senior Exhibition

The Department of Art and Design is proud to announce the opening of Intrinsic Parameters, the Department's 2016 Senior Exhibition, featuring work from the Senior Design and Thesis Seminar classes. This exhibit is hosted and made possible through the cooperation of Dorsky Gallery Curatorial Programs (DGCP) in Long Island City, marking a six-year-long partnership between the two institutions.

The conceptually accomplished Thesis Seminar work in Intrinsic Parameters investigates the complexities of cultural constructs related to memory, anxiety, heritage, and alienation/belonging. The material manifestations of these explorations embrace diverse creative techniques and strategies that range from installation and video to drawing and collage.

The Senior Design work features informational graphics and multimedia presentations created in response to the challenge of whether a design intervention could benefit a particular group and/or act as an agent of change.
